PROHIBITION AND FARM RELIEF TWO PLATFORM ISSUES

Democrat Platform Builders Have Numerous Divergent Planks on Wet Issue Monday

MOODY HAS PLANK THAT FAVORS DRY AMENDMENT

Believe Smith Forces Would Mention Amendment But Not Go as Far as Moody Wants

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—A profusion of planks dealing with the two big subjects before the Democratic national convention—prohibition and farm relief—were put forward today as leaders among the platform and planks held preliminary conferences in an effort to smooth over some of the differences on these subjects.

It seemed that New York state would join with Maryland and perhaps one or two others in supporting a plank calling for the modification of Volstead act.

Admittedly that proposal would get only a very few votes in the committee with the fight then narrowed to the question of whether the law enforcement provision should name the 18th amendment. There was some opposition to referring to the prohibition clause of the constitution above all others, the opponents desiring merely a law enforcement declaration with sharp criticism of the Republican administration for failure to enforce the laws.

He will not satisfy such dry leaders as Senators Carter Glass of Virginia and Cawaway of Arkansas, Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, Daniel Roper of South Carolina and Governor Dan Moody of Texas.

Governor Moody announced in a formal statement that the Texas state convention had instructed in favor of a plank for the national platform "unqualifiedly" endorsing the 18th amendment and declaring opposition to any attempt to repeal or destroy the prohibition law.

The precise attitude of Smith leaders regarding the dry plank has not yet been disclosed but the general impression was that they would accept a plank even naming the 18th amendment and pledging its faithful enforcement. However there was doubt that they would go the length that Governor Dan Moody suggested.

The farm relief proposals went to the extent of endorsing the equalization fee principle of the McNary-Haugen bill but the one offered by former secretary Daniels would pledge the party to the "enactment of legislation no less effective and far reaching in its efforts to give equality to agriculture and to provide the most effective possible solution of the problem of agriculture."

TRANS-ATLANTIC TRIO HONORED IN LONDON

LONDON, June 25 (P)—The indomitable trio, Miss Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz, pilot, and Louis Gordon, mechanic, met many notable and titled people at a luncheon today and were paid high tribute for their trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Wales.

The speakers included Sir Seton Branson, air vice-marshal, Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer; Sir Philip Sassoon, under-secretary of the air ministry, and Lady Astor. They agreed in saying that the flight tended to create a warmer feeling of friendship between the United States and Great Britain.

SIX BADLY HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

Crack Missouri Pacific Passenger Wrecked When It Hits Broken Rail

IOLA, Kan., June 25 (P)—A broken rail near Durand, Kan., today sent one car of the fast Missouri-Pacific passenger train "Southerner" crashing into a creek and overturned two others causing injuries to 63 persons, six of whom are in critical condition today.

Those critically injured are: Miss Hazel Hemphill, 20, Trenton, Mo., skull fractured; Mrs. Matilda Johnson, 74, Osage City, Kan., both legs broken; Mrs. Emma Southard, Lake City, Kan., probably fractured spine; Mrs. Ella Crowson, Kansas City, skull fractured and shock; Miss Alice Ricketts, Kansas City, skull fractured and shock; Ellen Locke, Kansas City, negro, skull fractured.

Physicians held little hope for the critically injured. Twenty-six injured were in the St. John's hospital. Fourteen others, injured slightly, continued their trip. Those in the hospital were rushed to Iowa on a one-car train, which was met by ambulances and doctors.

Most of the injured were in a steel chair car which fell 15 to 20 feet from the Owl creek bridge and lodged between the banks of the creek, above the water. Two steel Pullman cars were overturned. Railroad officials characterized the wreck as the worst in the history of the division.

OWSLEY ADVOCATES SMITH'S NOMINATION

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—Colonel Alvin Owsley, past commander of the American Legion and now candidate for the Democratic nomination to the senate from Texas, today described Alfred E. Smith as "the outspoken choice of the majority of the democrats at this convention and the entire country" and advocated his nomination on an early ballot.

The Owsley declaration, coming in the midst of his campaign for the senatorial nomination, led to speculation as to whether any effect would be shown in the Texas delegation.

Telegram Tells Woman She Is Being Robbed

CHICAGO, June 25 (P)—Miss Natalie Bartalan got a telegram yesterday advising her that she was being held up and to keep still about it.

Miss Bartalan manages a Western Union Telegraph company branch. She was busy managing it when a man entered, stood at the counter composing a telegram, and then handed it to her. It said: "Office being robbed. Stop, don't scream. Stop, one cry and you will be shot. Stop."

Cash and checks totaling $273 were taken.

SMITH TO GET FORTY FROM OHIO

Result of Caucus, and of Others Expected, Assure Smith Leaders They Will Win

By BYRON PRICE
Associated Press Staff Writer
HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—Meeting again like a reunited company of old comrades, the Democrats of East and West trooped into Houston today and joined hands under the high-flying banners of Smith of New York.

Caucusing as they came, the fast-gathering delegations to the national convention turned into a certain many of the promises of support on which the Smith men are relying for a quick nomination when the balloting begins later in the week.

An offer of forty of Ohio's forty-eight, and the expectation of similar pledges from various other states led the Smith lieutenants to predict that before nightfall he would have enough delegates openly and publicly pledged to him to bury remaining opposition in a first-ballot landslide.

The one discordant note of the whole big parade arose from a far-outnumbered contingent of dissenters, dry and anti-Tammany, and chiefly from the South. But it was shrill, somewhat defiant note, and it may be heard again from the floor of the convention which opens at noon tomorrow.

Some of the Smith enthusiasts, who said they based their opinions on reports that had come from such favorite son states as Indiana, Ohio, Nebraska, Kansas and Tennessee, put the ultimate strength of the anti-Smith irreconcilables at around 200 votes, out of a convention total of 1,100. The anti-Smithers themselves are claiming around 400 hundred but they refuse to say from what states they hope to get the votes.

News of the willingness of the Ohioans to swing forty to Smith on the first roll call preceded the delegation into Houston.

Record Rain of 7.61 inches fell Here on Saturday

Rainfall in Paris Saturday from 7 a. m. to 11 p. m. gauged 7.61 inches, believed to be the heaviest precipitation on record here. The rainstorm, reports indicated, centered in this section of Northeast Texas.

Damaging hail was reported at Mt. Pleasant. Crop damage was not as great as might have been expected as terraces held well. Many fields were standing in water, however, and some were badly washed but the effect of the heavy rain on cotton is not expected to be extensive in Lamar county.

Shocked oats were damaged but the moisture assures a good corn crop.

The Sulphur crossing on Highway 39 was never impassable though water came up some 18 inches over the concrete. Other creeks and lowlands in this section were out of banks.

NO QUIBBLING ON DRY ISSUE SAYS MOODY

Leader of Texas Delegation to Insist on Strictly Dry Plank in Platform

By L. B. DILBECK,
Associated Press Staff Writer

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—Any quibbling on the "great moral issue of prohibition is unthinkable" Governor Dan Moody, chairman of the Texas delegation to the national convention, declared Monday in his first formal statement since he arrived at Houston.

"I do not believe," he said "that the delegates from other sections of the country will be controlled by envious of the few places in this nation that are opposed to prohibition, but it is my judgment that they will recognize the serious thought of the south wherein is the heart and soul of the Democratic party. No attempt should be made to draw an overdraft on the Democratic loyalty of the south."

"We want agriculture placed on a basis of equality with the other businesses and industries and we want measures adopted that will relieve the millions who toil on the farms from a state of practical bankruptcy into which they have been carried under the Republican rule," the governor's statement said. "We want the corruption of it is sufficient upon which to base an appeal to the people to 'turn the rascals out.' We also want the Democratic party to take a forward position on the great moral issue of prohibition upon which the public mind feels with intensity. Any quibbling upon this matter is unthinkable."

"The resolution adopted at the state convention instructed in favor of a plank for the national platform unqualifiedly endorsing the 18th amendment and declaring opposition to any attempt to repeal it or to destroy the prohibition laws. It further instructed in favor of providing the faithful, strict and efficient enforcement of the prohibition laws and of other laws. I am confident that such a plank will be offered in this convention and that it will be supported by the Democrats of Texas. The serious thought of the South is in favor of prohibition and its enforcement and in my judgment if any improvements are to be made in the prohibition laws those improvements should be made by the friends of prohibition and no attempt be made by enemies of prohibition to emasculate the laws can be tolerated."

NATIONALISTS MAY INVADE MANCHURIA

SHANGHAI, June 24 (P)—The Nationalist news agency reports that the Nationalist government has decided to demand that Chang Hsueh-Liang, new overlord of Manchuria, accept Nationalist suzerainty, otherwise the Nationalists plan a military invasion of Manchuria.

Chang Hsueh-Liang is the son of the late Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, former northern dictator, who died from wounds he suffered early this month when a bomb exploded under the train on which he was returning to his Manchurian capital, Mukden, after being forced out of Peking by the Nationalists.

An invasion of Manchuria by the Nationalists might easily assume grave consequences as the Japanese have announced definitely that they would not permit the Chinese civil war to invade Manchuria. The Japanese have several thousand troops in Manchuria guarding Japanese interests there.

South Carolina For Watts
HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—The South Carolina delegation agreed in caucus today to cast its 13 votes for Richard Cannon Watts, chief justice of the state, for president on the first ballot.

NOBILE IS SAFE THOUGH RESCUE PLANE IS DOWN

Daring Swedish Aviator in Making Second Trip Turns Over Plane on Ice

GEN. NOBILE TO DIRECT RESCUE OF LOST FLYERS

Efforts to Find Trace of Amundsen And Others Still are Unrewarded

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 25 (P)—The second member of the crew of the Italia has been rescued tonight by airplane but four others of the crew of the wrecked Swedish airplane are still marooned on the ice.

Meanwhile on the broad arctic spaces still are 14 other men of whom there has been no trace.

Following upon the removal of General Umberto Nobile from the ice cake near Foyen Island Saturday the motor chief of the Italia, Natalia Cecciono has been rescued. Lieut. E. Lunberg, who crashed on his second rescue attempt after picking up Gen. Nobile, reported today that he has escaped injury and was attempting to put a runway on the ice block in shape for landing of light two-men planes.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 25 (P)—General Umberto Nobile today was aboard the base ship Citta Di Milano at Virgo bay recovering from injuries sustained when the dirigible Italia crashed on the polar ice cap on May 25. Soon after he was rescued Saturday from an ice floe by Lieutenant Lunberg, a Swedish flyer, who overturned on the ice, Nobile was aiding in the search for his comrades of the Italia with his advice and knowledge of ice conditions.

He hoped himself to lead an air expedition to search for seven men who drifted to the eastward in the balloon part of the dirigible after the crash. He is not expected to recover from his injuries for a month, however, and in the meantime plans are being made to search for these men under his direction.

An official medical bulletin issued today said his injuries were: "Incomplete fractured right shin bone, no healing. Dislocation of right foot and tendon torn. Also heavy concussion lower right back with abundant hemorrhage."

He will probably recover in about forty days.

A Swedish plane equipped with skis made a landing Saturday night on the ice near Foyen Island, a feat which the Italian rescue flyers here had thought impossible. A little later the plane took off with the injured leader, leaving his five companions, Lieut. Alfredo Viglieri, Frosser F. Behounek, Giuseppe Biagi, Filippo Troiano and Natalia Cecciono still stranded on the ice.

Nobile was carried to Hinlopen strait, which separates West Spitzbergen from East Spitzbergen, where he was transferred to another Swedish machine, a seaplane and transported to Virgo bay.

At that harbor, sixty miles to the north of the regular base at Kings Bay, he was restored to the care of his companions of the Citta Di Milano. Virgo bay was selected by the Swedish pilots for their base of operations. The vessel was then at Kings Bay and immediately sailed to take Nobile aboard, and to pick up other members of the Italia crew which might be rescued.

Plane Overturns

The Swedish flyer, having brought Nobile to safety, returned to the other marooned men to take them off the ice floe. There the plane made a second landing but overturned in the attempt. The pilot was not injured, but apparently he was stranded with the Italia survivors.

Efforts to find Roald Amundsen, who left Tromsø, Norway, a week ago in a French seaplane with five companions to join in the Nobile rescue work, have proved fruitless.

Mrs. Ross to Second Smith
HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming will make one of the second speeches for Governor Smith when his name is placed before the presidential nomination. Mrs. Ross' seconding words will come from the "dry" side of the house. Her friends have pointed out that her record has been consistently "dry" in spite of the fact that some of the leaders of the dry forces have insisted that she was "wet."

PALESTINE, June 25 (P)—Oil scouts today declared that the Mandelstam No. 2 Humble well in the eastern part of Anderson county, which blew in while making a core test yesterday, was capable of producing 1,000 to 3,000 barrels of oil a day. The new well extends the field for more than a mile. A tremendous gas pressure accompanied the flow of oil.

Here are Mr. and Mrs. James A. Reed as they arrived at Houston for the Democratic convention. The fiery Missouri senator is the main hope of the anti-Smith forces.

F. D. Roosevelt Is Smith's Leader on Convention Floor

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, candidate for the vice presidency eight years ago, today was named by George R. Van Namee, manager of Governor Smith's pre-convention activities to act as floor leader for the Smith forces in the convention.

Mr. Roosevelt, who lives at Hyde Park, Dutchess county, New York, will place the New York governor in nomination, a function he performed four years ago.

Questioned as to the governor's strength on the first ballot, Van Namee said "More than 650 and more and more over."

Without specific information as to the platform, Mr. Van Namee said he thought it safe to say it would be "much shorter" than the Republican platform.

MINEOLA MAN KILLED BY TRUCK

H. L. Elder Crushed As Son Backs Truck Into Loading Platform Here

H. L. Elder of Mineola died at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon of internal injuries received when he was crushed between a truck and a loading platform at the Cummer Manufacturing company. The body was taken to Mineola for burial Monday.

Mr. Elder and his son, L. T. Elder, had come from Mineola, hauling a truckload of machinery here from the Cummer plant at Mineola, and the accident occurred when the truck backed against the platform before Mr. Elder could get out of the way. He was taken to St. Joseph's infirmary and died in less than half an hour.

He and his son had been in the employ of the Cummer company for some time, hauling logs and machinery from various points over East Texas to the different plants.

He is survived by his wife and several children, living at Mineola.

MAYOR WALKER DRAWS BIG STATION CROWD

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—Mayor "Jimmy" Walker outdrew the other well known democrats arriving in Houston for the Democratic convention. The largest crowd of the convention season was assembled at the railway station to greet him to his automobile through lines of Texans and visitors shouting "Hey, Jimmy." The mayor was not quite his immaculate self, as he seemed to have left his razor at home and needed a shave.

The mayor was accompanied by Grover Whalen, chairman of New York city's reception committee, one in Borger.

SMITH OPPONENTS LACK UNITY ON CONVENTION EVE

Prohibition Issue Is Apparent Stumbling Block to Prevent Complete Harmony

TEXAS DELEGATION TO VOTE FOR JESSE JONES

Smith Forces In Control Eighteen of Texas' Forty Delegates Votes

By A. W. NEVILLE
Paris News Staff

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—The Texas delegation caucus tonight decided to vote for Jesse Jones on the first ballot. His nomination is to be made by Tom Ball of Houston.

Smith supporters on the Texas delegation reported control of eighteen of the forty votes, and they are working hard to get a majority. Indications are now that Smith will be nominated on the second ballot, and possibly on the first.

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—The Democratic presidential nomination lay just around the corner tonight for Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Meeting here to choose its standard bearer, the party's national convention will get together tomorrow at noon with a greater number of delegates committed to one man than at any time since 1912, when Woodrow Wilson was named by acclamation.

An insistent minority was doing battle against the New York governor tonight but it was not coordinated. Its cry was for a dry candidate and a dry platform but, where the Smith ranks are solid for their man, the minority group apparently had been unable to settle upon a unity of command or upon a leader for whom to wage its warfare.

HOUSTON, June 25 (P)—The eve of the Democratic national convention found prohibition thrust forward as the chief stumbling block in the party to complete harmony.

With party leaders hopeful that the wets and dries would be able to compose their widely divergent views in the resolutions committee, there were others who insisted the fight must be one to the finish.

Divided into three camps, one ultra-dry, another declaring for a wet plank and a third favoring approval of a law enforcement plank, it was admitted by practically all of the question overshadowed all other demanding attention.

From early today until long after night fall the dries were at work almost unceasingly. Starting off with a breakfast rally, this group broke up into sections, en journaled to the First Baptist church for an all-day session while another retired to a conference room in a city hotel to draft a plank calling for nomination of candidates "dry by their utterances and records."

Governor Albert E. Ritchie gave out a plank which declared in favor of progress taking steps to have prohibition turned back to states so that each state within constitutional limitations and under the principles of local option and home rule may have an opportunity of setting it in accordance with the will of its own people."

From another source—Governor Dan Moody of Texas—a third plank was forthcoming. It would declare for unequivocal endorsement of the eighteenth amendment and oppose any attempt to repeal it or to destroy the prohibition laws."

To all appearances the Smith leaders appeared to be making no effort to force a first ballot nomination, seeming content to put over their candidate after the favorable vote had full opportunity to show their strength. They continued to shrug shoulders at the efforts of the opposition to head off the governor's nomination, plainly confident that such activity would get their foes nowhere.

Although no definite claims of strength came from the official headquarters of the leading candidate, many of Smith's lieutenants made tabulations which showed that he was above the 700 mark in sure-fire delegates.

LAREDO PUBLIC SCHOOLS LOSE STATE AFFILIATION

LAREDO, Texas, June 25 (P)—L. J. Christian, superintendent of the Laredo Public Schools and M. J. Raymond, local attorney, will leave tonight for Austin to confer with officials of the State Department of Education, following notification today that the Laredo public schools had lost their affiliation through failure to meet minimum requirements.

The state board ruled that the Laredo schools had not provided an adequate library, did not have the proper lighting, seating and ventilation in elementary school classrooms and had not provided proper certification of all teachers. The board ruled, however, that all credits earned in the schools through the past semester would remain valid.

Y. M. L. MEETING
HELD MONDAY

B. F. Johnson of East Texas
Chamber of Commerce Is Principal Speaker

Assembling for the first regular meeting since the East Texas Chamber of Commerce convention, the members of the Young Men's League last night veiled their determination to enter upon a broader and more comprehensive plan of community service, a service that will encompass Lamar county as a unit, with chief activities focusing, for the time being at least, upon a program of rural co-operation and development. After dinner in the main dining room of the Gibraltar hotel a program of speeches was carried out.

Under the chairmanship of Dewey Lawrence, a number of forceful talks were given by league members and invited guests. B. F. Johnson, manager of the Service Bureau of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, delivered an address that, in effect, indicated the spirit of the entire meeting. From the time the program got under way, after a half hour or so of highly appreciated minstrelsy delivered by a talented quintet of local colored performers, the spirit of the meeting was that of a definite service. All the speakers reflected a grim determination to do their utmost to promote the interests of Paris and Lamar county. Everyone participated in round table discussion and all emphasized that the league had an inescapable mission as a civic organization and that each member of the organization was expected to do his full share in the work of assisting the welfare of the community in every way.

Although no official vote was taken, it is expected that the league will immediately undertake to conduct a county-wide campaign devoted to raising the standard of dairy stock.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—After a strong bulge on the opening today, to new levels for the movement, the price of cotton fell off moderately under realizing from the long side. Liquidation to take profits was to have been expected on any further advance and we do not consider that first July notice day had anything to do with the letting go as traders in this market are bound to be small, the certificated stock being only about 5,000 bales. The opening gains were made in the face of a poor Liverpool and were due to the wet weather in the belt. Over the weekend a great deal of rain fell, it being distributed rather irregularly all over the cottonbelt. In some sections the rainfall was very

The LOW-DOWN
By Jack Lancaster

Title, "Sorrell and Son."
Stars, H. B. Warner and Nils Asther.

Cast includes: Norman Trevor, Alice Joyce, Anna Q. Nilsson, Louis Wolheim, Mickey McBan, Mary Nolan.

Theater, Grand.

How we wish that we were gifted with the power to adequately express our appreciation of "Sorrell and Son." How utterly incompetent we feel when approaching the task of setting down in words the force and sweep of this superb motion picture. "Sorrell and Son" is something bigger and finer than mere words can describe. If, then, our descriptive powers seem woefully meager, ply us in our plight. For no man can fittingly describe a rainbow—and surely this film is that—even though the pot of gold brims over with tears.

As a novel, "Sorrell and Son" is magnificent, yet this infinitely tender story of the love of a father for his son is rendered even more exquisite in film form. From beginning to end it breathes the atmosphere of sincerity. It has pathos to the 10th degree, but never the maudlin sentimentality so generally prevalent in so-called "heart-throb" films. Its pathos is almost ethereal; something to be found by those whose eyes are not blinded by the murky atmosphere of the commonplace. And, in a measure, one feels as though he were in a hallowed spot, so reverent is the love of father for son and son for father. This emotional reaction is perhaps most powerful during that never-to-be-forgotten scene wherein Kit, rising from his bed at the behest of his tender-hearted wife, crosses to the side of his pain-racked father and there administers the drug that will relieve him of further torture. That scene seemed blended with another scene—a man of God, walking with measured tread down the length of a high vaulted, ill-lighted corridor that the Sacrament may be given to one whose earthly work has been well done, whose spirit is about to shed its mortal bonds. Perhaps we only imagined this second scene—or did you, too, glimpse it?

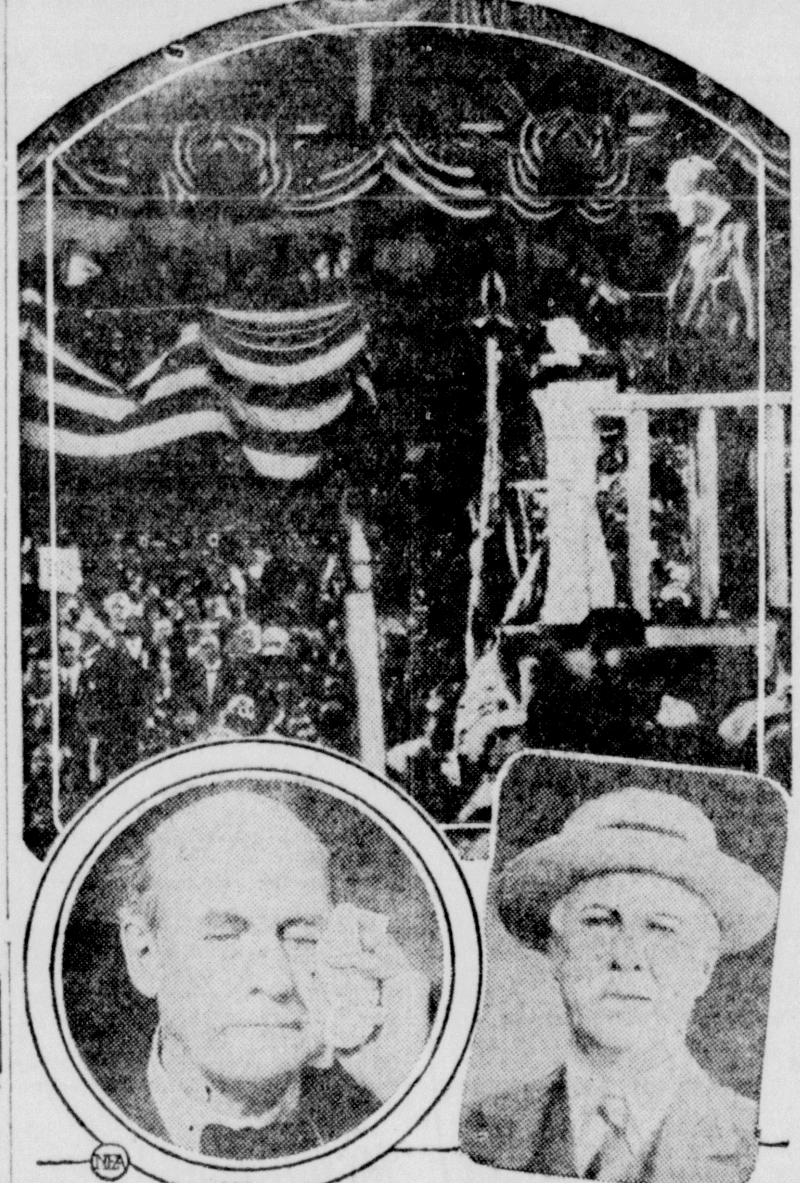

We doubt that the screen has ever reflected a finer performance than that given by H. B. Warner. As Captain Sorrell he has reached the highest pinnacle of his illustrious career—an achievement by which his work of the future will be judged. And Nils Asther, as Sorrell's grown-up son, has cast such a soft halo of splendor around his enactment of the role that he too will be weighed in the future against the measure of his present success. Others of the cast deserve their fair share of praise; there being none miscast or other than fully satisfactory.

From a production angle the film is well nigh faultless. Photographed in London, the actual locale of the story, the camera mirrors many entrancing vistas; under the superb, one might say inspired, Hunter loses at Outset.

Title, "Publicity Madness."
Stars, Lois Moran and Edmund Lowe.

Theater, Plaza.

We could scarcely believe our eyes when this film began to unwind, for we had never imagined Edmund Lowe in the role of a comedian of the Richard Dix-William Haines order. But sure enough, there he was—and doing right well with his assignment. "Publicity Madness" is a whimsical bit of nonsense resembling, in some respects, the airy plots of numerous musical comedies. No one can take the yarn seriously, of course and, to see that no one does, the director has made the production so broadly humorous that one can not miss its intent. From beginning to end it is nothing more than good clean fun, administered in ample doses.

Edmund Lowe is a sort of youngish Get-Rich-Quick-Wallington, while Lois Moran is the simple village maid who awaits the advent of Prince Charming. Quite naturally the astonishingly facile Monsieur Lowe proves to be the long hoped for Prince who by the expedient of rejuvenating the almost extinct business of the "Uncle Elmer's Saturday Night Soap" company, brings happiness to all and sundry, not excepting himself. It's a likable film, even though it aspires to no great heights and, simply to while away an amusing hour or so, we can conscientiously recommend it.

Sen. Robinson May Get Second Place

HOUSTON, June 25. (P)—Shifting winds of pre-convention speculation today swept new names into the vice presidential race and gave added impetus to the boom of Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

Incoming delegations pumped wind into the sails of new candidates whose names they attached to the already to the already lengthy list of entries, but in the confusion there were accidents and some of the names were scratched.

Out of the almost sanctimonious quiet of the Smith headquarters there came the intimation that Senator Robinson's name was favorably regarded by some of the leaders of that group and that farm delegates had looked coolly upon the boom that had met the name of Evans Woolen of Indiana into a place among those at the head of the list.

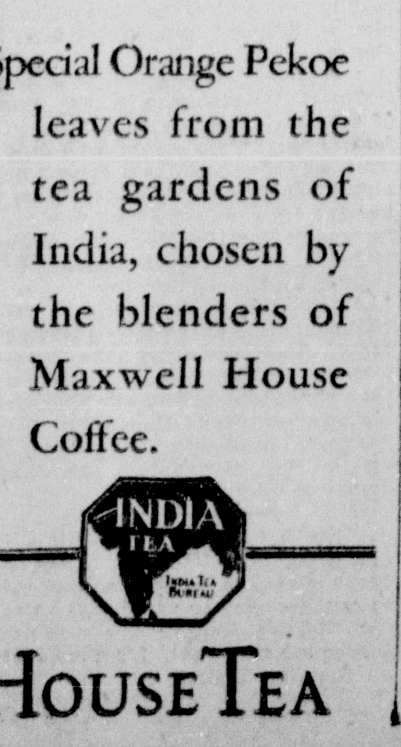

While Hull of Tennessee also was looked upon favorably by many incoming delegates, others felt that in the event that Smith gets first place on the ticket, Senator Robinson would add strength that was not to be spurned.

Too, it was said, Robinson is a veteran campaigner whose territory borders the stamping ground of Curtis. He has met the vice presidential nominee of the Republicans on an equal footing in the senate and would be able, they said, to carry the fight into the farm belt in addition to aiding in smoothing any ruffled feathers the south might raise.

WOMAN PREACHES
AT M. P. CHURCH

Mrs. Vera Gibbons Conducted
Revival Services at Methodist Protestant

At the Sunday morning services at the Methodist Protestant revival Mrs. Robert Cook and Mrs. Vera Gibbons sang a beautiful duet, "Speak My Lord," after which Mrs. Gibbons preached a very impressive sermon from the text in II Timothy 2:15, using as her subject "Passing Inspection."

Mrs. Gibbons mentioned in her introduction to the sermon, different items of industry which have to pass inspection, by the city, or state government inspectors, before they are permitted to be used in business, or in other words, must have the approval of the proper authorities. "If this be true," she said, "how much more important it is that we should be able to pass inspection and have the approval of our Heavenly Father's authority upon our daily lives."

Mrs. Gibbons drew the contrast between the amount of time spent on other things, and the time spent in studying God's word, to find out how one may have His approval of one's life. "Do we have the approval of God in our homes?" Mrs. Gibbons asked, and declared that God has a definite work for each individual, that every man has his definite calling, but that responsibility lies in what one is doing with the call.

The Sunday night service was attended by a great congregation filling the auditorium to capacity. The music was beautiful, and E. H. Doolin, the choir director using both choirs alternately rendered some of the best music of the entire meeting.

The special number was a duet by Dr. D. E. McVey and Mrs. Gibbons singing "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

The sermon delivered by the evangelist, Mrs. Vera Gibbons, from the text, Luke 7:11, was one of the most touching and yet inspiring that she has yet delivered.

Mrs. Gibbons pictured two processions, one coming out of the city, the other going into the city, one a happy, joyous crowd, the other a sorrowful procession, Christ at the head of one, and death at the head of the other. Mrs. Gibbons said that Christ never preached a funeral, for death could not abide in His presence.

The evangelist showed how there was rejoicing in both processions, over the resurrection of the young man who was dead, when Jesus said unto him, "I say unto thee, arise," and that there is rejoicing both in heaven and earth when a person who is dead in trespasses and sins, is raised to a newness of life through faith in Christ.

There were several visiting ministers in the audience which added much inspiration to this service. Four people raised their hands for prayer.

BIG AUDIENCES AT CHURCH OF CHRIST

Evangelist Harvey Scott Preach-
es at Lamar Avenue Church
in Revival

A fine audience was present Sunday evening at the revival at Lamar avenue Church of Christ, where Evangelist Harvey Scott of Sherman is doing the preaching. He is presenting lessons in love and kindness, and pleading for people to study the Bible and follow its teachings.

The audience Monday morning numbered 125. For the lesson Sunday night the speaker discussed the question of "Conversion." Reading from Acts 3:19 the speaker said, "Whatever conversion may mean it is necessary to the forgiveness of sins. It is necessary to the entrance into heaven. But conversion is not repentance, for the writer says that Peter said that they were to repent and be converted, that their sins might be blotted out."

"Some claim today that they have been converted and joined the church. But from what were you converted and to what were you converted? It is possible for one to be converted from one error to another and the second state worse than the first. In this connection read Acts 26."

"Jesus said that he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. Therefore repentance and conversion include the same thing that belief and baptism do. Conversion is a changing from one state unto another—a change from darkness unto light—from the power of Satan unto God. But repentance and conversion equal salvation and the Lord adds the saved to the church (Acts 2:47 and I Cor. 12:13). Therefore you are not converted to the Lord and then join the church of the New Testament, because when you are converted to the Lord you are saved and the Lord adds you to the church."

Service is held at 10 in the morning and at 8:15 each evening. "You are invited to be present at any or all of these services," says the minister, Tom Walker.

CENTRAL CHURCH
FEATURES MUSIC

Dr. Wear Speaks on Treasures
In Heaven and Christian Fellowship

The topic for the morning hour of worship at Central Presbyterian church Sunday was "Laying Up Treasure in Heaven." (Matt. VI, 19-24). The pleasing anthem, "Gladness in the Garden," with incidental solo by Mrs. C. Bearden and duet by Mrs. E. Grimes with Earl Dale, were features of the music.

"The human race," said Dr. Wear, the pastor "is perhaps naturally acquisitive, and this is a good trait, when under control. But without proper guidance, it produces thieves and misers. Jesus teaches us, in this message, to think less of material things and more of spiritual, and indicates three reasons for His mention. "The treasures of earth,—towards honors, wealth,—are temporary. Often wealth brings disaster; one catastrophe may wreck the home, into the building of which years of patient toil have gone, honors crumble and decay."

"Our treasures in heaven are determined by our consecration, devotion and loyalty here. Our attitude toward our fellow-men will determine our reward of heaven. Let us be kindly, compassionate. The way we receive Christ's messengers, the way we spend our money, these determine our rewards in heaven."

John 4:7-21 was the scripture for the evening, the topic being "The Basis of Christian Fellowship." Fisher Osburn's solo was "Have Thine Own Way."

"There is no fellowship greater than that brotherhood called Christian," said Dr. Wear. "This should be so manifest that there could never be a doubt of it in the mind of the world. Love should abound between Christians because of belief in one great, good God, a common experience of regeneration, and the common task laid upon us by Christ's great commission."

RESPECT FOR AUTHORITY

MAYOR J. MORGAN CROOK sustained action of three Paris patrolmen who overpowered a gathering of young men who late Friday night
became embroiled with the policemen when they attempted to arrest one of their number for drunkenness. The inquiry into the difficulty came after a youth, who claimed he in no way interfered
with the arrest, made formal complaint to the mayor that he was struck over the head unjustly.

Both the officers and the youths who were
at the scene of the trouble in the center of the plaza offered their versions of the affair and from
it developed facts that both sides agreed to: That
one of the young men was intoxicated, had used
profanity that attracted the attention of the police on the street, and that a melee ensued when
an attempt was made to arrest one of the group.
In such a circumstance, waiving all other testimony, the blame primarily rests with the young offenders. No one person or group of persons has
the individual or collective right to override the sanctity of the law. Either organized police protection must reign in public places or other authority that we can not place in the category
of our American institution must. Judicial authority alone is to determine the justification of
an arrest if the officer chooses to take into custody a man on the street when there is a breach of the peace. When a policeman arrests a man for drunkenness or disorderly conduct, the blame for
any tumult that follows must automatically fall
on those who are insubordinate to the constitu-
ed agents of civil authority.

The license of youth has gone too far when
this sort of rowdism prevails on Paris streets after midnight. Altercations with the police, if conducted in any measure, will inculcate in youth
that has already had too much liberty a disrespect for authority that will prove detrimental to our social welfare.

A THRILL IN THE NEWS

IF our time were not so completely taken up just
now with political maneuvers arising from the
two party conventions, we surely would have appreciated the story of the Arctic plight and rescue of Captain Noble and his men for what it really is—one of the most gripping, absorbing
stories of the past year.

For real drama nothing has happened in a long time to equal this northland tale. A group of men sets forth to conquer the ancient fastness in a great silver dirigible. They fly to the pole and start to return. Buffeted by storms, they are driven far off their course. The world loses communication with them and gives them up for lost.
And then, suddenly, radio keys began to click. The lost men were alive—alive and on the ground, marooned on desolate ice fields far to the north. Their dirigible was wrecked; they were trying to get ashore but were being baffled by widening lanes of open. They asked for help.

Then began the attempts at rescue. Airplanes
soared over the ice and passed close to the wanderers, failing to see them although seen by them.
And all the time came the messages from the
stranded explorers—messages that grew fainter
as the radio batteries grew weaker.

It is a long time since the newspapers have
had anything more truly thrilling and interesting than this. There is something about an attempt to rescue anyone who is in dire danger that never fails to grip the human heart. When an ignorant Kentucky hill billy got trapped in a cave far underground the nation watched breathless, for
many days while men struggled to reach him.
When the submarine S-4 sank, the pitiful under-sea tragedy held the attention of everyone while
the divers worked frantically to the tune of the faint hammer taps on the steel hull.

We can not read about such things unmoved.
Inevitably, our hearts go out to the victims, and
we pray that the rescuers may succeed.

The inward necessity that makes us feel that way is a good sign. It proves that men are not quite as widely separated by misunderstanding and prejudice as we sometimes think. There are common grounds on which all of us may meet. Extreme danger is one of them. Perhaps the old
theory that different races, classes and nations
must always be antagonistic is mistaken.

It is.

SOME PROHIBITION STATISTICS

GATHERING statistics on the effects of prohibition has been a great sport for several years.
Here's a new one to add to your collection.

In Boston, Bunker Hill Day—June 18—is
one of the big holidays of the year, especially in Charlestown. It is always featured by a big parade,
speech-making and considerable revelry.

This year, according to the Boston Post, Bunker Hill Day brought fewer arrests for drunkenness than ever before. Only 25 people were taken into custody in Charlestown for that offense; furthermore, no one was arrested for disturbing the peace or disorderly conduct, also a record.

You can, as we said, add that to your collection of prohibition statistics if you like.

George Remus, Cincinnati bootlegger king and wife player, has been freed from the asylum as sane. Ohio is certainly well posted on the advanced legal methods.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

HOUSTON, June 25—Vice presidential candidates are always picked geographically and
possibly the nomination of them sometimes has a
slight moral effect on their sections, but they seldom if ever exert any influence on an election result.

Sometimes their ticket carries their own state
and sometimes not. Generally it depends on how the state feels about the nominee for first place.
The Republicans at Kansas City put Senator Charlie Curtis of Kansas on the front seat alongside Hoover as so much recognition for the agricultural states, hoping that there might be some moral effect to be gained. But if there was any farm
state the Republicans had a right to be sure of
it was Kansas, and if Hoover can't carry Kansas,
he can't carry much of anything.

None of the dirt farmers your correspondent
has seen since the Republican nominations were thinking in terms of Curtis—they were talking about Hoover. If Jim Reed were the Democratic vice presidential candidate Missouri would seem fairly certain for the Democrats, but he's an unusual case.

NOMINATION of Governor Charlie Bryan of Nebraska to run with Davis in 1924 had as much
effect in the west as the naming of an Eskimo.
Senator Wheeler of Montana was regarded as likely to carry Montana for La Follette, but didn't
quite, although he did some dandy campaigning.
Dawes roaring about the "Red menace" undoubtedly attracted votes to Coolidge, but there was never any doubt about Illinois.

Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York was sunk
with Cox in his own state as badly as anywhere else in 1920; even the Roosevelt name apparently failed to get any votes. Everyone knows that Massachusetts would vote for Harding, even without
her own Cal Coolidge on the ticket.

The two vice-presidential candidates of 1916
were both Hoosiers, Thomas R. Marshall running again with Wilson and Charles W. Fairchild tied to Hughes. Indiana was distinctly a doubtful state and both parties wanted it. Hughes and Fairbanks
won it by only 7000 votes.

OF THE second place men in 1912, Hiram Johnson seems to get credit for holding his home state of California for Roosevelt. Wilson and Marshall had a set-up in Indiana with the Republican split and Taft's mate, Sherman, of New York, sank in home waters for similar reasons.

In 1908 Kern of Indiana, running with Bryan,
probably helped bring the ticket within shooting
distance of victory in that state, though it
lost. The Taft-Sherman ticket held New York easily.

In 1904 the aged Henry G. Davis couldn't deliver his own West Virginia for Parker, while Fairbanks, running with Roosevelt, rode to a big victory in Indiana. Roosevelt helped McKinley carry New York in 1900 but Adlai Stevenson and Bryan lost Stevenson's Illinois.

Hobart and McKinley won New York in 1896,
while Bryan's mate, Sewall, of Maine, lost on the home grounds. Adlai Stevenson, running with Cleveland, helped win Illinois in 1892, while Whitelaw Reid couldn't save New York, which
was also Cleveland's state.

BRONCHOS AND LOLLIPOPS

VERILY, the hard-boiled glories of the western frontier are passing. The Department of Commerce the other day issued a set of figures dealing with the consumption of candy in the United States. It had everything tabulated by states; and what state do you suppose led in the per capita consumption of chocolate bars, gum drops and the
other dainties of the sugar shop?

Why, Nevada, to be sure! Nevada, where the burning sun beats down on thousands of miles of parched desert; Nevada, where in the hell-roaring
mining camps of old, whiskey was rated a drink
for babies, and bullet wounds were considered
minor affairs like mosquito bites; Nevada, where
the hardy prospectors wore skins for underwear
and whipped their horses with rattlesnakes.

And the second state in per capita consumption of candy was Montana, possessor of a similar past.

The frontier has been tamed.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

GERMANY'S NEW GOVERNMENT

From the Fort Worth Star-Telegram:

THE proposed new coalition government in Germany, under the leadership of Hermann Mueller, Socialist, promises to continue in general the
policies that have prevailed for some years in the republic. Were the questions to be decided purely domestic ones, there likely would be frequent clashes.

But Germany has still its most important work
in the foreign field. Locarno spells peace, yet all international problems have not been settled. For that reason we may expect the various coalition
parties to work in harmony in carrying out their
general policy of peace.

The bloc system is made necessary by the inability of any party to poll a majority vote of the nation. The Socialists, numerically the most powerful, fall considerably short of one-half of the electorate.

So long as that condition continues, it will be necessary to govern through a group composed of representatives of different factions. That they all
regard international peace as a major question
promises well for the future.

Charles F. Brush, Cleveland inventor, has given $500,000 to be used in hunting the population. A good start would be annihilation of all males and females who say "for cryin' out loud."

The Al Smith forces from New York held out
an olive branch to the other Democrats when they arrived in Houston. But what most of the other Democrats were asking was "Who gets the grapes?"

A movie actress married her first husband
the other day for the third time. When you sink
the third time, they say, you're usually all

Parking Rules For Umbrellas Go For King And Subjects Alike

By DOROTHY RUSSELL

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London (P)—The king and queen of England, like 40,000,000
of their subjects, are seldom seen
without a capacious umbrella
hooked over one arm.

Once one has encountered a London downpour he can sympathize with them. The precaution
however, has its disadvantages, for
should one want to drop into a picture gallery to get out of the
wet he must relinquish the umbrella and run the risk of losing
the elusive metal tag which alone
will enable him to claim it.

But then even the king and queen take this risk. When they paid a private visit to an exhibition of antiquities the other day His Majesty's quick eye read the notice
stating that all walking sticks and umbrellas must be checked at the entrance and immediately insisted
on surrendering his own and the
queen's in spite of the curator's
remonstrance that an exception
would be made in their behalf.

This incident no doubt recalled
to the queen another which amused
her some years ago. She was visiting unannounced a museum in a small town in Norfolk, and the curator, not recognizing her, insisted on taking away her umbrella.
Unaware that this was a usual occurrence, Queen Mary momentarily
demurred, but the curator was ad-
mant, and realizing the situation,
the queen smilingly complied. His embarrassment later, when he discovered the visitor's identity, must have been consoled by the fact that Queen Mary thought him a very conscientious guardian of the town's treasures.

The devotion of the royalty to
their umbrellas is not confined to the king and queen. The Prince of Wales is almost always seen
with his, crooked over his arm,
and the Duke of York carries one
on many occasions. Most of the royal ladies are particularly partial
to their umbrellas, in spite of the fact that they are usually within easy reach of the shelter of a building or a limousine. No doubt umbrellas are popular with them
however, because they are often
a help during long periods of

standing on ceremonial occasions.

In bygone days it was said that
the royal umbrellas were in reality weapons in disguise—a legend
perhaps inspired by the existence
of a sunshade lined with chain
mail, which belonged to Queen Victoria. But whatever the reason,
the curious fact remains that royalty has ever had a profound response for its umbrellas, and to this
day the whole of England follows
suit.

MARK CENTENARY OF SILK LOOMS RIOTS

PARIS, (P)—That this year is
the hundredth anniversary of one
of the earliest revolts against labor saving machines has been marked in Paris by the retelling of
the story of the riots and arrests
which took place in the great silk
weaving city of Lyons upon the appearance of the first Jacquard
loom in 1828.

News of the trouble was carried
to Paris on horseback and published by the Journal des Debats, still
among the leading Paris papers.

"A deplorable scene, and one
that shows the ignorance of the working class," reads one of these
century old dispatches "occurred
within the walls of Lyons when
there was carried through the streets a mechanical loom. A group of workmen gathered and wished
to smash the loom. The commissary of police arrived but the crowd only showed more fury.

Mayor Sandier himself appeared
and although wearing his insignia
of authority he was ignored. Gen-darmes were called and dispersed
the crowd with difficulty, arresting many."

Lyons was the scene of still further violence before the machines
were accepted and it is recalled
that similar revolts against machinery occurred later in Paris.
Typesetters went on strike, parading the streets, crying "Freedom
of the Press" and protesting against
the replacement of hand presses
with the newer power press.

BRITISH SURVEY MAY SOLVE RED HAIR MYSTERY

LONDON, (P)—The mystery of
red hair and why it is prevalent in certain families may be illuminated as one of the results of a survey
now being conducted by British
education and health authorities.

An anthropometric committee is collecting data from all parts of Britain on the physical characteristics of school children. The effects of environment on physique
will be further revealed.

The committee's findings may explain why there are so many
strongholds of the red-headed in Scotland, and why a vein of red-
haired people runs through some
countries in England and Wales
while in other localities the "reds"
are as rare as albinos.

FEED THE SICK THROUGH SKIN

VIENNA.—It may be possible in
the near future to feed one afflicted with throat or mouth disease
through the skin.

After a year's experiment, an Austrian doctor has succeeded in
forcing enough nourishment
through the skin of a patient to maintain strength and body heat.

The process used by the doctor
consists of massaging the skin
with a mixture of fat, proteid, sugar and necessary vitamins. This is absorbed into the system and
has an advantage over the blood
and digestive process in that it is almost completely absorbed.

Care of the Colon One Health Secret

There is a fixed idea on the part
of many doctors that the state of
the health depends on the condition of the colon. They are about right as I see it.

You will recall that the lowest
and final part of the intestinal tract is called colon. In constipation this is more or less packed with fecal matter. The popular idea
is that all this is waste material,
that the body has appropriated
what it could use and has rejected
because it possesses nothing of value. While much of it is waste,
pure and simple, a considerable
part of the contents of the colon
is made up of dead bacteria and bacterial growth.

Because of intestinal sluggishness
and the action of germs or bacteria upon the fecal matter, fermentation and putrefaction result.
These processes produce poisons
which are absorbed by the system,
and cause all sorts of symptoms.
Headaches, loss of sleep, fitful
appetite, inflammation of the
bowel lining, neuritis, and loss of
general efficiency are common effects.

Since it became known that the colon is capable of holding such a
putrid mass of germ laden material, there has been much discussion of what to do about it. To get rid of the reservoir it used to be recommended in the most solemn manner to operate and remove
the colon.

Operations are often necessary,
and, when properly done, promote human happiness, and extend
the span of life. But in any case,
I view with suspicion the advice to
operate, unless the doctor has given consideration first to every possible remedial measure. Certainly,
it would be a confession of medical
weakness to remove an organ simply because it functions might be delayed.

Along comes another authority
claiming that old age is due to intestinal germs. He recommended
sour milk as a means of relief,
pointing to the Bulgarians, who
drink much of it, as wonderful examples of youthfulness even in advanced age.

The latest plan to overcome intestinal fermentation is to give
cultures of "Bacillus Acidophilus"
milk containing this germ. This is really useful.

You know how important it is to
keep the weeds out of your garden,
so that the "garden truck" can grow. If you plant thickly the seeds of your vegetables and properly cultivate the soil, the good
seeds grow and thrive, giving the rank weeds no chance.

The purpose of giving the bacil-
lus acidophilus is to plant in the colon, colonies or gardens of a friendly and useful germ. When once it is thriving, the bad and
fermenting germs are crowded out.
When the unwelcome germs
no longer multiply fermentation
and putrefaction disappear. This is the theory.

Unfortunately, lack of exactness
in carrying out the methods of
using the Bulgarian bacillus and
the bacillus acidophilus, may result in failure of relief. There may be other reasons for failure.
Chief of these, perhaps, is the
wrong choice of the daily foods
and the lack of exercise.

Common sense demands that
the natural methods should come first. Then we may add the use of kindly and friendly germs to kill
off the unfriendly and harmful intestinal bacteria. Here it is that the bacillus acidophilus may serve mankind.

FRENCH MINT MAY SELL BIG STAMP COLLECTION

PARIS, (P)—France may sell
part of her stamp collection. This is the complete set of postage
stamps issued by France since
stamps first were used here in 1848, a collection that covers 80
years.

The government mint keeps the
rare old copper plates that made
them in a safe that holds the dies
for stamping metal money and the official set of platinum weights
and measures. There are three keys to the safe, each held by a
different official and all necessary
for the opening of the big treasure
chest.

There are several sheets of
many issues of the old stamps and
often a number of proofs in various colors that were never advised. Also there are many foreign stamps, exchanged through ex-
changes with other governments.
Mint officials propose putting a
complete set in the national library and selling the remainder,
expecting to get big prices.

The Reason For This STAR SALE

HERE comes a time in the history of every business when it is necessary to make drastic readjustments. Sound Business Methods demand that a merchant should do a certain volume of business in proportion to the size of the stock he carries. Owing to conditions over which we have no control, we are frank to admit that we find it necessary to use unusual—even spectacular—means to bring about this readjustment.

To do this quickly means loss to us and gain to you. This "Star of All Sales" is the supreme merchandising event of our career. It cuts deep. Read every word of this three page advertisement—then come—expecting much. You will not be disappointed.

★ A Star event is one which stands superior to all others. That is why we call this sale "The Star of Sales." In value and savings it will soar far above any other sales event ever attempted in this section.

TEXAS GARAGE MAN REGAINING HEALTH

Tom Meador Was Ill Nearly
Ten Years, Now Able To Be Back on the Job Since Taking Orgatone.

A busy place is the Meador Garage at 107 West Pecan street, operated by W. T. (Tom) Meador, who is well known to citizens of Sherman, but between the jobs of directing work to be done, discussing motor problems with his customers, or doing the thousand and one other things which are necessary in the operation of a successful garage, "Tom," as he is familiarly called by everyone, told the Orgatone representative recently that he believed Sherman had a bright future.

"Why," said Mr. Meador, "I have lived here nearly all my life, and no city that has the splendid farm territory around it, as Sherman has, can do anything else but move forward. Then, too, we are securing several factories in Sherman making for its industrial growth."

"The farmers," continued Mr. Meador, "are using more diversified methods in farming, not depending upon one crop entirely, and are finding that they can grow and produce most anything needed in home life of this vicinity. I have been in business for years in Sherman, and have watched the town go steadily forward, and of course my business has steadily increased. And while my health was very greatly impaired for a long time, I believe that is now overcome and I attribute it to the use of your Orgatone."

"There was not much wrong with me, except that I had stomach trouble very badly, and suffered terrible headaches, and was forced to take vacation rest periods frequently during the year. But now, since using Orgatone, I am able to be on the job all the time, and am not afraid to eat anything I want and do not fear that I shall suffer for it."

"I can imagine," said Mr. Meador, "that my friends must have thought I was a very grouchy person during the past few years, but I know now that when a person's health is about gone he naturally would not feel like laughing a great deal. I am certainly glad that I have found relief from my condition, and now that I am regaining my health, I mean to be on the job all the time and boost for the continued growth of Sherman."

Genuine Orgatone is sold in Paris, exclusively by the Corner Drug Store under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative who is meeting the public daily.—Adv.

HOUSTON HAS BLOSSOM TOO BIG FOR DELEGATES

HOUSTON, June 25. (P)—Houston, a city of flowers at this time of year, boasts of one bloom that will be too large for the blossoming delegates to the Democratic national convention to wear in their button-holes.

For thousands of magnolia trees with their white, pink and purple flowers, will be at full bloom when the convention opens June 26. Many of the blossoms are as much as a foot in diameter, and some even larger.

The huge magnolia trees, sometimes growing as large as the oak, thrive in the damp climate here, blooming from about the first of June until the middle of July.

OFFICERS' ACTION IS SUSTAINED

Special Investigation Made After Complaint Filed by Youth Struck By Officers

Action of the city police in a difficulty with a group of youths which occurred on the plaza at an early hour Saturday morning when they were attempting to arrest a young man for drunkenness, was upheld by the city council following report of the Police committee. Alderman Sam Payne and Robert Cook, and Mayor Morgan Crook held a formal investigation of the affair Monday afternoon, following complaint of a young man that he had been unjustifiably struck over the head with a pistol by one of the officers during the difficulty. Several young men, including the young man who made the complaint, and the officers were witnesses. The young man who was struck by the officers stated that he was not hit during the melee that occurred in the center plaza space, when officers were making the arrest, but that, at the time he was struck he was standing aside looking on. The testimony of the other young men bore this out in substance. The officer who struck the young man, declared that he did so because the young man, had attempted to take the alleged drunk youth away from him by force.

The affair, the evidence showed, took place when officers' attention was attracted to a group of young men in the center of the plaza by cursing on the part of one member. The officers went to investigate and, on so doing, attempted to arrest one of the young men for drunkenness. A difficulty ensued when the police attempted to take the youth who was finally placed in jail for drunkenness. It was during the course of the difficulty that the young man, who filed the complaint was struck over the head by one of the officers.

Alderman Payne reported unfavorably on the proposal for the paving of Twenty-fifth street, between Houston and Price streets. Bids for the sale and cutting of the city's properties were received by the council and Mayor Crook was authorized to enter into the details of the matter and if advisable, to close a contract.

An ordinance, providing that no animals will be accepted for slaughter by the city abattoir later than 4 p. m., was passed. A request for ornamental light standards on Grand Avenue was referred to the light committee.

Gone! World Most Famous Curls

Mary Didn't Shed Single Tear In Bobber Shop

NEW YORK, June 25.—"Oh, my beautiful hair!"—that was Mary Pickford's exclamation when the first of her golden curls fell prey to the snipping scissors of Charles Bock, New York hair dresser.

She then settled back in the chair heroically while Bock snipped again and again, and the most famous curls in the world were laid solemnly, one by one, on a table.

"Just let me touch my last curl," Mary entreated when there was only one left. With a caressing gesture she drew it slowly between her fingers. Then there was another snip.

Finally Bock handed Mary a mirror and asked for her verdict. "It's marvelous," she cried delightedly. "I'm glad the curls are gone. I'm going to be grown up now."

Bock said, however, that she really looked even younger than before.

"She has a long cut," he explained, "very feminine. Nothing severe or boyish would suit her. It comes nearly to her shoulders, but curls up to make the softest possible frame about her face. She left the cut entirely to me, and I studied out one that would suit her personality rather than conform to the general mode."

"Her hair is fairly long in the back, long enough so she could roll it up and have a foundation to pin her curls back on if she ever wants to give the effect of long hair again in a picture."

MANY ENROLL IN PENNY BUSINESS TRAINING COURSE

Paris Store Has Six Students Active In Course Offered Employees

A complete course in business training is maintained by the J. C. Penny Co., for all employees, in addition to the training given in store management and salesmanship by the individual store managers, according to a statement of R. H. Finney, manager of the Paris J. C. Penny Co. store.

The business training course is conducted by correspondence and while it has been in operation for a comparatively short time, the number of employees who have enrolled is given as $700, this representing a large percentage of the company's employees, and 1500 of those enrolled have already been graduated.

"In the local J. C. Penny Co. store, there are four employees now taking this course," says Mr. Finney, "and six associates are registered as graduates."

Commenting on the purpose of the business training course, Mr. Finney said:

"The broad attitude of the J. C. Penny Co., in regard to the training of employees is well expressed in the words of the founder, J. C. Penny, 'I believe in education. It is a constructive force which makes for trained ability, improved judgment, accuracy and therefore, increases the individual's capacity for practical co-operation.'"

"In the early days of the company it was possible for Mr. Penny personally to train his associates and thus to maintain the principles upon which the business was founded. With the increase in the number of stores, there now being 1024 in operation, located in 47 separate states, it obviously became impossible for him to maintain this personal contact."

"This resulted in the adoption of the present training course developed to perpetuate the foundation principles of the organization. Each local store manager functions as a teacher of his associates. He conducts regular store meetings at which operating methods of all phases of store service in the local community are discussed."

"The business training course, with its booklets and lesson materials supplements the personal activities of the store manager and carries on the work which he initiates in general business education."

The students read the material in the printed courses along lines prescribed as general methods for study.

"Lesson papers are prepared by the students covering each chapter of the training course. These papers are forwarded to the educational department of the J. C. Penny Co., in New York and are there individually examined by members of this department. Suggestions are offered by the examiners, to the employee-student and every effort is exerted to make his or her work more interesting and more full of possibilities."

Split Doubleheader

The Colts split a doubleheader with Texarkana Sunday afternoon, the home club annexing the first game by a score of 6 to 5, while the visitors grabbed the afterpiece by a 1 to 0 count.

Abo Bowman, playing his last game in a Paris uniform, outpitched the Twin ace, Sis Hopkins in the first game, and the former manager turned in a good game as a farewell performance. The Twins made a bold bid for this contest in the eighth, when they scored three runs on clean hitting, but the rally was one short of the necessary margin. The visitors scored two runs in the first round without the semblance of a base hit, and then for the next six innings Bowman was the Bowman of old and mowed the Twin sluggers down in workmanlike manner. The blow-off in the eighth came as a surprise, and it was vicious while it lasted.

Wood, batting for Thorpe in the eighth, doubled to left, and Parson was thrown out by Bowman. Speer singled to left and Wood scored. Windham was cared for by L. Cato and Radcliff, but Krause thumped a double to right center and Speer scored. Clements hit to left, scoring Krause, but Moore ended the inning with a foul fly that F. Cato snatched in.

Hopkins turned the home club back in the first round, but was nicked for a run in the second on a single by Lynch. Cato's sacrifice, and scored on L. Cato's double. In the second, Kinnear got a hit, was sacrificed by Adair and rode home on "Mississippi" Fugler's home run over the right field wall.

yanked him, threw the ball against the grandstand. Molenda relieved Hopkins and was bumped for a run in the seventh on a base on balls to Adair, an error by Molenda and a single by Radcliff that scored Adair.

The second game was a pitching duel between Raper and Wood, the visiting chunker allowing the Colts only two hits, while Raper was touched up for four, one of which was a double by Wood that scored the one and only run of the contest. Raper got into deep water in the second round, when a hit by Speer and a sacrifice by Clements and an error by L. Cato got two Twin runners on the sacks with only one out, but Raper tightened up and got out of the hole without being scored on.

The lone run of the contest was made in the fifth when Krause walked and went to second on an out by Clements. "Grandpa" Wood then smacked a double to the left field wall, and Krause romped home.

The game was featured by some excellent fielding with Adair, as usual, being the bright and shining light. The captain made some marvelous stops and throws, plays that bordered on the miraculous. Storey Williams also made some great catches in center field that held down the scoring. He robbed Kinnear in the first game by a great running one hand catch and played great ball, both in the field and at bat.

The Colts left Sunday night for Corsicana to play out their scheduled games in that city. The club was in charge of Ludwig, who will act as manager, at least temporarily. Manager Bowman was given his release Sunday night, and did not accompany the team.

The Paris club was formally turned over to the league Sunday night, following the games in the afternoon and the league will operate it for a few days, or until other arrangements can be made. There are negotiations pending between the league head and some local fans and this deal will most likely be consummated. There is a trio of local men with whom negotiations are being carried on, and the result of these negotiations will probably be concluded today. Abo Bowman, former manager, is still in the city and has made no plans as yet for the future. Bowman did the best he could with the material on hand, and no one can blame him, incidentally, for the poor showing of the club in the first half of the race. His release was due to economy, it was stated, and there is genuine regret among many fans in the passing of Bowman. The deposed manager gave the club and the fans all he had.

Farrell Wins National Championship Defeating Bobby Jones in Play-off

CHICAGO, June 25. (P)—Johnny Farrell, newly crowned open golf champion of the United States at the age of 27, steps forth today to survey his kingdom, reap the $50,000 reward that goes with it and take his place as the third figure in the greatest triumvirate of shot-makers America has ever had.

The slim young Irishman with the contagious smile and the fancy sweaters beat the master marksmen of this trio yesterday, Bobby Jones, king of the amateurs, in a spectacular 36-hole playoff for the championship, 143 to 144. He outstroked the other, debonaire Walter Hagen the day before in the final half of the 72-hole competition that left him and Jones deadlocked at 294 strokes each with Hagen in a tie for fourth at 296.

Thus, out of the battle over the rugged No. 4 links of the famous Olympia fields layout, Farrell, from what seemed a hopeless chase after his first 36 holes, came back to gain a tie as Bobby slipped and skidded on his final round. With the big chance before him in the playoff, Farrell met the final test of championship calibre. Jones, on the last two holes, shot two successive birdies, but could not break down Farrell's morale or gain a single stroke.

Two of the greatest mauling shots that have ever been seen, under pressure, in championship competition, followed by two deadly putts, enabled Farrell to beat back the challenge of the Georgian. Farrell laid the first of these iron shots to the seventeenth pin, with a two-foot putt for a birdie three which he made good after Jones had sunk a desperate twenty-footer. Johnny fired the second of these decisive shots from the rough, some 75 yards from the long final hole, leaving himself an eight-foot putt that he made to win the title as Jones' ball rested nearby.

The fashion in which Farrell came through to succeed Tommy Armour, the black Scot, as the open champion leaves no doubt of his right to join Jones, still the amateur king of them all, and Hagen, the British open titleholder, as the big three of American golf. For Farrell there is national championship honor for the first time after years of triumph in lesser fields. Of Jones, even in defeat, there remains no doubt he keeps his place in the van of the par-shooters while Hagen, the professional king and now British champion for the third time, completes a trio that has bagged just about every distinction in sight.

Junior Colts Win 2 Games Monday

Bowman's Junior Colts defeated two teams Monday, winning from the Brookston school team 14 to 3 in the morning and taking an afternoon game from Snow's Snubbers, 7 to 1, both games played on the local diamond.

The Junior Colts thus uphold their record of no defeats for the season and challenge any team in their class to a game.

The game with Brookston was the second won from that nine by the Juniors, while White and Yorkie staged a double play, and G. Boyer getting two two-base hits.

West Texas Loop
Prexy Removed
ABILENE, June 25, (P)—West Texas league directors here Sunday practically smoothed out the tangle in which the league has been involved, capping their action by declaring vacant the office of president, heretofore held by J. McAllister Stevenson of Abilene and electing as his successor E. E. Lowrie of San Angelo.

Prior to completion of the ouster movement, Stevenson had declared that he would rescind all action which had precipitated the controversy, namely the disfranchisement of Abilene and San Angelo, suspension of their managers, Les Tullos and Earl E. Shapp, suspension of the entire Abilene team, and assessment of a $100 fine against Army Magness, Hamlin manager and each of the Hamlin and Abilene players participating in a series at Wichita Falls which began Friday.

Stevenson denied the jurisdiction of the directors to remove him except in case he found "criminal" conduct of financial misconduct. "Until this is proved, he avers, he will consider himself president of the league."

He said that he would appeal the case to Mike Sexton, president of the Association of Minor Baseball Leagues. A telegram from Sexton to Guy Airey, Wichita Falls baseball secretary, was read at the meeting.

Phelan Subs for Rockne
Harry Phelan, Purdue coach, took Knute Rockne's place at a coaching school in Tennessee early in June. Rockne's Olympic plans prevented his participating.

NERVOUS HEADACHE
 Kentuckian Tells How Taking Black-Draught Relieved His Pains and How Well He Feels Now.

Waynesburg, Ky.—How a few doses of Theodor's Black-Draught brought relief to a man who had been suffering from frequent spells of severe headache, is told below in the statement of Mr. Charles F. Todd, of Etesburg, near this place. "I was suffering with nervous headaches. About once a week I would have these headaches, and have to quit work, and go to bed for about twenty-four hours. I would have pains in my neck, and right behind my right ear. "A merchant at Etesburg saw me one day when I was suffering, and told me to try taking Black-Draught, which I did. "I took a package home that night, and took a few doses. It relieved me. From that time on, I would take Black-Draught as soon as I felt like I was going to have one of these headaches—and they wouldn't come on. "Every few weeks, I take three or four doses of Black-Draught, and I feel so well, and do my work, and don't lose any more time with headache. "I haven't had a headache in six months." Costs only one cent a dose. Get a package today. NC-189

When A Girl Loves

Chapter 38.

Virginia submitted unresistingly to Oliver's embrace. Her mind was blurred with shock and despair. The fine spirit that had flamed against her father's intruder was quelled. She lay quietly, a broken crusader.

Over her head Oliver's face took on an expression of amazement, so thoroughly had he been convinced a moment before that he had lost her.

He relaxed his hold, to help her to a chair. A great, struggling sob wrenched itself suddenly from her lips as her mind broke loose from the paralyzing talons of fear.

She thrust out her hands and freed herself with one vigorous shove. Oliver staggered away from her, tripped on the edge of a thick rug and fell flat on the floor.

Virginia laughed, a strange laugh that sounded weird in the prosaic surroundings. It was mingled with hysteria and ridicule.

Oliver's face burned hotly as he scrambled up, all dignity lost to him.

"You little devil," he shouted,

believing that she had fooled him deliberately, though for what purpose he did not stop to ask himself.

Virginia did not answer him. She had turned toward the door and saw that it was opening slowly. But she was past caring who might witness the scene she was leaving.

The newcomer was Miss Evans. She took one comprehensive glance at her employer and withdrew with Virginia, closing the door behind them.

"I did not know if you were laughing or crying," she explained in apology for her intrusion.

Virginia did not make a direct answer. "You'd better get your things and come with me," she advised, suddenly conscious of what Miss Evans would be in for at Oliver's hands when he learned where Virginia had got the information that had exposed him. He was sure to make a hurried investigation, she foresaw.

"Does he deserve it?" Miss Evans countered.

"He deserves to be shot."

"All right. Will you wait, though, until I tell him I'm leaving? I've been breaking in Miss Lord for the job, and he won't be inconvenienced."

"I'll wait for you downstairs," Virginia told her. "Bring all your things and we'll take a taxi to my office. I think I can get you a position there."

Miss Evans beamed. "I won't be a minute," she declared gratefully.

Later, on the way to the offices of the Blue Capella Steamship Line, Virginia told her more about the position she might be able to get for her.

"They told me a few weeks ago that I could have an assistant," she said; "but I thought I could do the work alone. I'm afraid it's not going to be so easy for me to concentrate on it now."

She paused and looked away with an unfathomable expression in her eyes. "They will need someone to take my place soon. I'd like you to have it, and if I can help you to fit yourself for it I shall feel I've repaid you a little for the sacrifice you have made for me."

She turned her head and saw that Miss Evans was looking at her questioningly. "I hope you aren't thinking of giving up your position just to advance me," the secretary said unhesitatingly.

"No," Virginia returned quietly. "I'm going to be married."

Miss Evans exclaimed with pleasure, thinking of course that Virginia meant that she was going to marry her artist fiancé. "Oh, I'm so glad," she cried; "a girl as beautiful as you are needs someone to look after her. It must be heavenly to be in love," she added with a little sigh.

Virginia did not reply.

At the Blue Capella offices Virginia left Miss Evans at her desk and then went to Mr. Welkins to explain that urgent private business had kept her from the office. Welkins was very nice about it, knowing that Virginia was a conscientious worker.

"I've brought a very capable woman with me whom I'd like to engage as my assistant. If you still feel that I need one," she said when they had settled the matter of her nonappearance that morning at nine.

"Splendid," Mr. Welkins surprised her by saying. "I'd intended putting one of my own girls on your 'force,' Miss Brewster, to see if you could break her in to take your place for a while. We want you to go on the Southern cruise of the Agena."

He stopped, and Virginia sensed that he was waiting for an expression of pleasure. Ordinarily a trip on the Agena, especially to the West Indies, would have thrilled any of the Blue Capella's employees. Apparently Mr. Welkins expected her to be delighted.

Her silence puzzled him. "You will be glad to go, won't you, Miss Brewster?" he asked uncertainly. "We want someone as hostess who will know how to make the passengers feel as though they were our guests on the ship. Bring them together; see that everyone has a good time."

"Why, I don't know," Virginia began hesitatingly. "There are a number of things I'd have to think about before I could decide, Mr. Welkins. But if you will give me a few days . . . I want to talk to Mr. Dann about it . . ."

"Of course, of course. Well, let's meet your new assistant and see if she will do."

Virginia went out to send in Miss Evans. Presently the latter returned to say that she had been given the position.

By closing time Virginia had about made up her mind that she would refuse the offer to go as hostess on the Agena's cruise, though a chance to get away from New York and the immediate influence of Frederick Dean appealed to her strongly.

The thought of Nathaniel swung the pendulum of desire back to New York as she counted the time she would be away from him if she accepted the assignment.

There was all too little time to be with him, she feared, her mind still on the setback Oliver had caused her. A slowly growing conviction that she would have to pay her pound of flesh—flesh of the heart—was bringing her to face a very real possibility of having to count each hour with Nathaniel one of a fast vanishing few.

But she still had a small part of her yearning. Was she then of such poor stuff as to lay down her arms at the first sign of defeat? Virginia bolstered up her waning courage by flaying herself with scorn for being an "easy quitter."

The cruise would last six weeks, and who could tell what she might accomplish in that time? Virginia had not even a vague idea of how to use the time to advantage, but she felt that it would be a total loss to her if she were to leave the city.

She reconsidered her intention to talk it over with National. "He might say I ought to go," she thought. "Anyone would; but I think I'd go mad with suspense if I were where I couldn't even try to fight."

She might have gone to Welkins at once to tell him of her half-formed decision, but it was late and she knew that Stacy Blaine was in his office.

Blaine was just off the Altair. In from a run to Panama and the islands of the Caribbean. Virginia had met him on one of his previous visits to the office of the Blue Capella. They were rather good friends, and he never returned to the home port without bringing her some memento of his latest voyage.

Virginia knew he would come to her when he left Mr. Welkins and she hurried a little, hoping to get away before the conference ended. The thought of chatting with him at this time filled her with dismay.

Stacy's business with Mr. Welkins must have been of small importance, for he appeared before Virginia's desk sooner than she had expected. After a friendly

NATIONAL TITLE WEEK

OFFERING SOUND TITLE INSURANCE

Everybody carries insurance in some form, Life, Fire, Accident, Tornado, Burglary and Automobile. Title Insurance is just as necessary and more valuable and costs less. June 25 to June 30 has been selected as a period of making known to our property owners this form of protection for Land Titles.

"It has been our policy," said Mr. Gill of Gill & Johnson, abstractors, "to give the people of Lamar county, absolutely dependable, accurate and reliable title work, in making abstracts; and we are now prepared to offer the same service in Title Insurance."

"We have not offered this form of protection heretofore, because we were not content to ask people to rely on small companies with limited capital, or to depend on some form of re-insurance as a backing for the small company."

"Now we have perfected arrangements, by which our office can offer title policies, issued by our offices, as direct obligations of the New York Title and Mortgage company, under the supervision of the State Insurance Department, and backed by over Forty-Four Million Dollars of assets."

"Title Insurance has long since passed the stage of experiment and large lending institutions, such as Life Insurance Companies, Loan Companies, Banks and others are using exclusively as a guarantee of titles. It is now available as well to individuals and the rates are so low that there is no appreciable addition to the cost of the land, and at the same time there is an absolute guaranty of the title."

Gill & Johnson will be glad to give property owners or holders of mortgages full detailed information.

"You little devil," he shouted,

greeting he remarked feelingly: "Suppose you still refuse to dine with me? But you ought to, you know; I'm pretty blue and not a sweetie in town."

"You're a great sailor," Virginia forced herself to say in the manner of their usual give and take.

"You never will believe that I'm true in every port, will you?" Stacy laughed back. "Just the same I am way down low. Ran in to some bad news concerning an old friend of mine in Haiti. Chap called Oddly. Nome's O. D. D. Leigh. Great character all through the West Indies. Well, here's a gewgaw for you. Shameful how you take gifts from me and never give a thing in return."

He tossed a bracelet made of shiny brown seeds on Virginia's desk with an air of being helplessly exploited. Virginia admired it an thanked him, but he noticed a detached note in her voice and manner.

A slight frown crossed her brow and she appeared to be thinking of something that troubled her. "Oddly Oddly," she murmured softly, then to Stacy: "I'm sure I've heard that name before."

"No doubt you have," he replied complacently; "fellow's well known to a lot of people. Anyone coming back from Haiti would be likely to speak of him."

"No, it wasn't recently, if you mean you think I've heard of him here in the office," Virginia said. "I can't remember when I heard his name before, but I'm positive it was long ago."

"Well, he's been in the public eye for years, ever since he first started bucking the sugar trust in the islands. So you won't date me?"

That was always his closing line and Virginia always smiled him away.

She continued to ponder over the reason why the name of O. D. D. Leigh had struck fire on some forgotten memory and only put it out of her mind when she lifted the
